

THE MEMPHIS DAILY APPEAL.

MEMPHIS, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1860.

VOLUME XI.—NUMBER 37.

BY MCCLANAHAN, TROUSDALE & DILL.

Daily Appeal

SPEECH OF MR. T. C. HINDMAN, OF ARKANSAS.

On the Opposition to the House, and also On the Speech of Mr. Brown, of Ohio, delivered in the House of Representatives, January 15, 1860.

Mr. Hindman being entitled to the floor said—

Gentlemen. I thought the floor yesterday was not appropriate for making what is called a speech. But I did it to make one now. As the Right Honorable Member from Ohio has done his best, I suppose I might, with some propriety, occupy a few moments, in showing that he is not alone in his opinion.

That was my object yesterday, and it is my object now. To every Hon. A. J. S.
but will not be necessary. I propose, to discuss those last, long-winded, foolish, sophisticated, and specious arguments, which shall consume us a great part of the day.

When we have done, the opposition would be

effected at once, and the business of the day
taken up again.

The first, and most important point, is

that we are to demand a perfect

abolition of slavery.

Secondly, that we are to demand a

compensation for the slaves.

Thirdly, that we are to demand a

gradual emancipation.

Fourthly, that we are to demand a

gradual colonization.

That is all.

Now, Gentlemen, I thought the floor

was not appropriate for making what is called a speech.

But I did it to make one now.

As the Right Honorable Member from

Ohio has done his best, I suppose I might,

with some propriety, occupy a few moments,

in showing that he is not alone in his opinion.

That was my object yesterday, and it is my object now. To every Hon. A. J. S.

but will not be necessary. I propose, to discuss those last, long-winded, foolish,

sophisticated, and specious arguments, which shall consume us a great part of the day.

When we have done, the opposition would be

effected at once, and the business of the day

taken up again.

The first, and most important point, is

that we are to demand a perfect

abolition of slavery.

Secondly, that we are to demand a

compensation for the slaves.

Thirdly, that we are to demand a

gradual emancipation.

Fourthly, that we are to demand a

gradual colonization.

That is all.

Now, Gentlemen, I thought the floor

was not appropriate for making what is called a speech.

But I did it to make one now.

As the Right Honorable Member from

Ohio has done his best, I suppose I might,

with some propriety, occupy a few moments,

in showing that he is not alone in his opinion.

That was my object yesterday, and it is my object now. To every Hon. A. J. S.

but will not be necessary. I propose, to discuss those last, long-winded, foolish,

sophisticated, and specious arguments, which shall consume us a great part of the day.

When we have done, the opposition would be

effected at once, and the business of the day

taken up again.

The first, and most important point, is

that we are to demand a perfect

abolition of slavery.

Secondly, that we are to demand a

compensation for the slaves.

Thirdly, that we are to demand a

gradual emancipation.

Fourthly, that we are to demand a

gradual colonization.

That is all.

Now, Gentlemen, I thought the floor

was not appropriate for making what is called a speech.

But I did it to make one now.

As the Right Honorable Member from

Ohio has done his best, I suppose I might,

with some propriety, occupy a few moments,

in showing that he is not alone in his opinion.

That was my object yesterday, and it is my object now. To every Hon. A. J. S.

but will not be necessary. I propose, to discuss those last, long-winded, foolish,

sophisticated, and specious arguments, which shall consume us a great part of the day.

When we have done, the opposition would be

effected at once, and the business of the day

taken up again.

The first, and most important point, is

that we are to demand a perfect

abolition of slavery.

Secondly, that we are to demand a

compensation for the slaves.

Thirdly, that we are to demand a

gradual emancipation.

Fourthly, that we are to demand a

gradual colonization.

That is all.

Now, Gentlemen, I thought the floor

was not appropriate for making what is called a speech.

But I did it to make one now.

As the Right Honorable Member from

Ohio has done his best, I suppose I might,

with some propriety, occupy a few moments,

in showing that he is not alone in his opinion.

That was my object yesterday, and it is my object now. To every Hon. A. J. S.

but will not be necessary. I propose, to discuss those last, long-winded, foolish,

sophisticated, and specious arguments, which shall consume us a great part of the day.

When we have done, the opposition would be

effected at once, and the business of the day

taken up again.

The first, and most important point, is

that we are to demand a perfect

abolition of slavery.

Secondly, that we are to demand a

compensation for the slaves.

Thirdly, that we are to demand a

gradual emancipation.

Fourthly, that we are to demand a

gradual colonization.

That is all.

Now, Gentlemen, I thought the floor

was not appropriate for making what is called a speech.

But I did it to make one now.

As the Right Honorable Member from

Ohio has done his best, I suppose I might,

with some propriety, occupy a few moments,

in showing that he is not alone in his opinion.

That was my object yesterday, and it is my object now. To every Hon. A. J. S.

but will not be necessary. I propose, to discuss those last, long-winded, foolish,

sophisticated, and specious arguments, which shall consume us a great part of the day.

When we have done, the opposition would be

effected at once, and the business of the day

taken up again.

The first, and most important point, is

that we are to demand a perfect

abolition of slavery.

Secondly, that we are to demand a

compensation for the slaves.

Thirdly, that we are to demand a

gradual emancipation.

Fourthly, that we are to demand a

gradual colonization.

That is all.

Now, Gentlemen, I thought the floor

was not appropriate for making what is called a speech.

But I did it to make one now.

As the Right Honorable Member from

Ohio has done his best, I suppose I might,

with some propriety, occupy a few moments,

in showing that he is not alone in his opinion.

That was my object yesterday, and it is my object now. To every Hon. A. J. S.

but will not be necessary. I propose, to discuss those last, long-winded, foolish,

sophisticated, and specious arguments, which shall consume us a great part of the day.

When we have done, the opposition would be

effected at once, and the business of the day

taken up again.

The first, and most important point, is

that we are to demand a perfect

abolition of slavery.

Secondly, that we are to demand a

compensation for the slaves.

Thirdly, that we are to demand a

gradual emancipation.

Fourthly, that we are to demand a

gradual colonization.

That is all.

Now, Gentlemen, I thought the floor

was not appropriate for making what is called a speech.

But I did it to make one now.

As the Right Honorable Member from

Ohio has done his best, I suppose I might,

with some propriety, occupy a few moments,

in showing that he is not alone in his opinion.

That was my object yesterday, and it is my object now. To every Hon. A. J. S.

but will not be necessary. I propose, to discuss those last, long-winded, foolish,

sophisticated, and specious arguments, which shall consume us a great part of the day.

When we have done, the opposition would be effected at once, and the business of the day